

Mag.—Where's your Mother?

Mag.—(to boy No. 2).—Where's your father, boy?
 Answer.—In Wandie Man's Land, Sir.
 Where's your mother?
 Answer.—In California, Sir.

Eventually the magistrates committed them under the Vagrant Act for twelve months, with orders that they should be sent to Melbourne where the Government might place them in the Penitentiary. At the course of the trial they stated that they earned their living by breaking up the doors whereon tents had been and getting the gold lost by the inmates of those abandoned places.

HEALTH OF BEXHEDGO.—The health of the people of Bexhedgo is getting daily more precarious, and disease is very general, and its increase is attributed to several causes. Some of the medical men say that there is a quantity of arsenic in the water; others, with more reason, decide that the purveying animal matter which is allowed to rot in the streets is the cause of the disease.

highly populated places, is the chief cause in the increase of disease. With regard to the presence of arsenic in considerable quantities in the water, I believe this to be a mere surmise, and a tolerable opportunity of judgment is afforded to declare that the mixture of ardent spirits with the water is the prime source of disease. The spirits vendid in the city of the six grey establishments are of the most poisonous character—sulphate of copper, laudanum, the decoction of tobacco, and even strychnine, are the common ingredients of adulterated spirits. If sold, as they leave Melbourne, they are sold as pure as to pure—the veriest trash that can be found up in the market is good enough for the diggers, so long as the stuff scorches the throat it is considered good and strong by the great mass of the diggers. As a proof of the quality of the stuff, I will quote the following:—A neighbour of mine is selling champagne at 6s. per bottle. In illustration of the quality of the ner in which life is sacrificed on these gold fields to the of drink, I would merely record one, which lately occurred among the many cases which have now come under my observation. A young man, aged 21, named George Dix, kept a chewing store at Forest Creek, and with it a grog establishment.

In administering to the comforts of others he did not forget his own, and he gradually glided from the position of a sober person to that of a confirmed drunkard. Delirium tremens seized him, and in the fit he seized an ounce bottle of prussic acid, and he consumed the contents, and dropped dead, and the words being "all is over now." He had not been sober for four months.

THE ABOVE PERSON—Mr. David Blair, the agent of this excellent Society, has just paid Blair
a visit, after having first been at the other side

His report, as published in the Argo, to the Society, states the fact that the various Government camps are the feces of drunkenness and debauchery. While at Bendigo, Mr. Blair slept in a camp, and was laid up with ophthalmia, notwithstanding which he declares he could see through the doings of the Celestials in the Government sphere. Whether or not Mr. Blair exercised a sound discretion in accepting the hospitality of those whom he had so unparaphrasedly condemned, I leave the reader to decide.

BENDIGO LAND SALE.—The sale of the Town lots has taken place, and after all the fuss about the land, the whole of the lots sold were purchased by about fifteen land speculators. Some went up to £15000 per acre, and the price of the BENDIGO BURELAGE.—The very centre of Bendigo "suction store" and the adjoining parts, are to be denominated "The Mall." What likeness there is now, or likely to be, between the mass of dirty coffee shops and huxter's stalls, in the Bendigo Mall, and the next place from which the nom de guerre is taken, it would, it is certain, puzzle the brains of the clearest head in Victoria to discover.

MORE LAMBS.—The allotment surveyors are busily engaged in laying out towns in the suburbs of Bendigo, on the northern side, being a part of Lyndar's run. This is a beautiful spot, quite arcadian appears to have been exhibited practical evidence of its capability of yielding a description. Herein is the forerunner for the Victorian philanthropists, if they wish to put down drunkness,—let them give the people plenty of land: comfortable homes and homesteads are the best antidotes in this respect. Hows River, for example, around the Bendigo, is fearfully on the increase. Lyons and Mount Pleasant runs have been completely swept of the horses which depastured there. The crime is carried out in a wholesale manner; mobs of horses would be stolen, the thieves counting that the penalty now set is the same, in case of detection, whether the number be twenty or a hundred. The lax manner in which some of the auctioneers carry on their business, has, I think, a very material

INFLUENCE in promoting horse stealing; so long as those gentlemen get their ten per cent. on every horse they sell, what is it to them that they are doing anything really called upon to refund the price of a horse which they sold?

STAGE LIFES IN THE BENDIGO.—Miss Lennox of the corps dramatique, was lately brought before the Police Magistrate, on a charge under the Vagrancy Act. The lady was committed to prison for one night, in order to give her an opportunity of disproving the charge. Some of the junior commissioners called on her to express their sympathy. She was bailed out the next day in the amount of £10, and has since disappeared.

THE NEW POSTAGE ACT.—There is scarcely an Act passed by the Victoria Legislature, that has given more offence to the people of the gold fields than all the complaints against it are loud and general, and is looked upon by the Ultramarine as a magnificent and a noble act, that the honorables of the Legislature are a batch of scoundrels, as they march backward.

RATTLERS OF THE BENDIGO.—A medical man named James Egan Wall, of the Sydney side, was a few days since brought before the Police Magistrate, charged with assaulting Patrick McGowan, the landlord of the Campaspe Inn. Wall had been mixed up with a horse affair in the following manner; he had borrowed a nag for the race week, on condition that he was to send for him, the horse being on Lynott's run, near the Pindari, Wyndham, and the Bendigo.

an animal answering the description, but which eventually proved to be the wrong horse. Wall, after using the horse for some days sent a man to deposit it near the spot from whence the horse was taken; while doing which the owner of the horse, a colored man, whom he summoned before the Magistrate for having in his possession a stolen horse. Wall in his evidence, it is said, stated that he had paid Mc-Gowan for obtaining the horse off the ran, and Mc-Gowan in company with Mc-Gowan, the latter residing near the Bendigo, called at Wall's tent for an explanation. High words ensued, and Wall called the Police Magistrate a liar. The squatter, who is a friend of the magistrate, jumped off his horse to lay hold of Wall, McGowan took from him, and Wall, who held an axe which was again taken from him. McDugall now rode off to the camp, and a body of constables returned and seized Wall. The case occupied the whole day, and after a deal of cross-examining, ended in Wall being found guilty. It was very curious, and he summoned McGowan for an assault, inasmuch as the latter shook his riding whip over Wall's head, but after another day's hearing and the same amount of cross-examining, the case was dismissed.

BENIGDIO AND CASTLEMANIA.—Great is the rivalry existing in the minds of many of those who dwell at the two places. In games of every kind this rivalry is displayed, and some fortnight since several hot-headed men of Benigdio met at Castlemania, the equally zealous partisans of the latter township. The meeting took place, of course, in one of the hotels of Castlemania, and both of the various kinds of liquors were the belligerent parties. Several of the bacchanals of both places slept in the house, and the Benigdio party capped the whole affair, by waging that they would jump over the heads of the men of Castlemania.

and the landlord on going to see the cause of the uproar in the sleeping apartment, caught the men of Bendigo in the act of doing the leap over the heads of their foes. He reasoned, of course, but in a moment one of the most astute of the Bendigonians (an auctioneer of the most successful kind) stepped forward (the auctioneer was over boarder's head) and said: "The party were called in, and they shared the same fate; they were jumped over. The whole interlude was brought to a happy termination over a round of champagne; the Castlemaine men declaring that in horse-racing, dog-fighting, cricketing, and last but not least, in politics, they had no chance with the vaulters of Bendigo."

MECHANICS INSTITUTE.—Better far than all our horse-racing, balls, and theatres, as a sign of the good time coming," is the fact that we have had some meetings on the propriety of establishing a Mechanics Institute. Liberal subscriptions have been entered into, and we hope for success in the movement.

THE CHINESE.—The Celatians continue to pour in; the Eagle Hawk and the Long Gullies are really studded with them; from personal observation, I estimated their number in these localities at 1500!!

NOW LANDING, ex Peter Godfrey, from London—Belmont sperm Candles, in excellent condition.
RAND, MONDAY, and CO.,
 71, Hunter-street.

WALNUT-TREE LOO TABLE.—One of the most magnificent specimens of walnut-tree wood, in the shape of an oval loo table, with beautifully carved stand in the Elizabethan style, may be seen in the drawing-room department of DEAN'S Furniture Warehouse, City Theatre, Market-street.

IRON BEDSTEADS, Iron Cots, and Iron Cribs, in endless variety, at DEAN'S Furniture Warehouse, City Theatre, Market-street.

BRICKS.—About one hundred thousand Bricks, of the primeest quality, for sale. Apply to FRANCIS WALKIN, Perthamie.

Mason turkeys
 Ditto ditto, fixed stands
 Covered dishes
 Meat ditto, 8, 9, 10 12 inch
 Baking ditto, ditto
 Royal ironstone jugs, 1 pint, 1, 2, 3, and 4 quarts
 Ditto soup tureens, with stands
 Ditto butter, covers, drainers
 Sugar boxes, marmalade, mustard cups, &c.
 Terms at sale.

stoves, boats, and appliances, &c., as she now lies off of Plaza Company's Wharf.
The Louisa was built at Portland, in the State of Maine, she is coppered and copper fastened, well found in sails, stores,
&c. Her length is 90 feet 3-10ths, beam 23 feet 1-10th, depth 17 feet 7-10ths; she is a strong faithfully built vessel, and well adapted for the Eastern, New Zealand, or cattle trade. Incoming freightmen are invited to inspect her before the day of sale.
The Louisa is in course of preparation, and further particulars may be ascertained at the office of the Auctioneers.
Terms liberal, at sale.

of these farms, as they feel convinced that they only require to be known to be appreciated by public, wasting much. They were selected many years ago, from the great natural advantages they possess, to which may now be added the great fact of a railway running close by, and which, when once brought into operation (in a few months' time probably), will render this property of very great value indeed, and well worthy the attention of speculators.

Fishes are on view at the Rooms, where any further particulars may be obtained.

Titles—Sci.-Nat. Terms, liberal

They seem to do pretty well, and are evidently a better class of Chinamen than the generality of their countrymen who have migrated to New South Wales. Their grotesque habiliments are fast disappearing in favour of the more substantial dress worn by the Englishmen, and they are now to be seen in their long boots with all the air of a mandarin. They are very moderate in their estimates of gold digging, as they only work old ground and do a little surface, still by application they get on. It is amusing to watch them at making purchases, when they come to cabages, at half-a-crown each, they yield up their money with a "high-way" peculiar to the natives of the Hawkey land. It is to be hoped that when they return to their own country they will carry with them the feeling of gratitude and respect for the nation which permitted them to enjoy the same privileges in these gold fields which Englishmen themselves partake of.

Selling off.—A further store is being brought to the hammer, in consequence of the enormous price of the necessities of life. The auctioneers are reaping a rich harvest, and many of the storekeepers will make a fortune in the sudden rise of goods. Things are getting up to famine prices, as the following sale will testify. Recent prices:—Flour, 1s. 6d. per bushel; meat, 7s. 6d. per lb.; rice, 1s. 6d. per lb.; sugar, 1s. 6d. per lb.; oil, 2s. 6d. per lb.; butter, 1s. 6d. per lb.; eggs, 1s. 6d. per lb.; and all the other staples are in a fearful state. Horses are very high, the first class draught reaching £160 and upwards. Bullocks too are in great demand. The following is the scale of wages:—Carpenters, 17s. 6d. per day; smiths, 20s. ditto; masons, 15s. 6d. ditto; tin-smiths, 25s. ditto; bricklayers, 15s. 6d. ditto; sawyers earn what they like as there is great demand for sawn timber. Bricklayers do well, too, in the fact the mechanics labourers may be said to be in a state of "drunk, drink, drink," all there in the evening. All their necessities in money matters are only the prelude to disease and death in too many instances.

Gold is £3 18s. 6d. per ounce.

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND.

The following are from the latest papers:—THE ALPACA.—A further despatch on the subject of the introduction of the Alpaca into the Australian colonies appears in the Gazette of the 23rd instant. From the enclosure it appears that Mr. Flores, who undertook to export them hither, better known under the name of Cajo Flores, is a person of a very peculiar character. He was for some years employed as the agent and spy of General Belzu, and in such capacity visited Peru and Ecuador. Belzu later had reason to distrust him, and he is consequently excluded from Bolivia. I fully believe, says Mr. C. H. Adams, that to Admiral Moresby, that at the end of 1852 he had by some collusion with Belzu, the power to ship clandestinely alpacas, but certainly not with the open sanction of the Government. Under present circumstances it is impossible to obtain alpacas from Bolivia except by contraband, which could not be countenanced by Her Majesty's Government. In October, 1852, I had occasion to address a request on the part of Her Majesty's Government to the President of the Republic of Peru, to permit the export of alpacas for Australia. I have the honour to forward a translated copy of the reply of the Bolivian Government. It must have been almost immediately afterwards that Mr. Flores, with such connivance, sent his party to the Peruvian coast, and the Bolivian Government according to such permission, it would require a special authority from His Lordship the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to enable me to accede to either the instructions of the Duke of Newcastle, or the request of the Governor of Australia, in guaranteeing the payment for the Alpaca proposed to be embarked. The Duke of Newcastle, therefore, states that, as the British Government could not with propriety be a party to the introduction of the Alpaca into the Australian colonies, the enterprise must be abandoned. —Hobart Courier.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.—The quantity of grain and flour imported and exported at the port of Hobart, during the week ended 10th May, 1854, inclusive, was:—Imports, wheat 170 bushels, flour 1 ton; exports, barley 141 bushels, flour 1 ton; and the quantity of goods imported and exported at the port of Launceston, during the week ended 18th May, 1854, inclusive:—Imports, oats 5696 bushels, flour 184 tons; exports, wheat 170 bushels, flour 1 ton.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Mr. Newham, who was one of the sufferers from Newham conflagration, and has been in the hospital since the 14th inst., died on Saturday. His medical attendant considered him convalescent on Saturday, but the following day he was removed by his medical attendant to the hospital of St. George's, Adelaide, South Australia. —Launceston Examiner.

THE REV. J. G. MEDLAND.—The late congregation of this gentleman intend to secure his permanent services—a handsome sum has already been subscribed towards this purpose.

ACCIDENT.—On the 24th ultimo, one of the soldiers engaged in firing the guns at the Mulgrave Battery, met with an accident which might have been attended with most serious results. It appears the soldier's cartridge caught fire, and he was thrown a considerable distance, and burning a portion of his clothes. The other soldiers who were on the spot immediately stripped him, and several medical gentlemen, who were standing close by, were in attendance, and he was removed to the hospital, where he received the necessary medical treatment, and he is now recovering from his injuries which he received were but of a slight nature. He remained insensible for a few minutes, but soon recovered to be able to walk to the barracks.

AT LAUNCESTON.—A man has picked up one or two specimens of quartz, impregnated with gold, on the estate of Ilmaro. If he finds more, it is the intention of the proprietor to forward a quantity to London for analysis.

ACCIDENT.—On the 23rd instant, Mr. Parker's son, Launceston, accidentally shot Mr. Waldron, the publican's son. It appears that the boys had been firing at each other's hats in Mr. Parker's back garden, when by some accident Mr. Parker's son fired at Mr. Waldron's hat, and the bullet struck him in the forehead, and lodged itself in young Waldron's thigh. Medical assistance was speedily procured, and the unfortunate sufferer received every attention his case required.

MINOR PLACES.—The late Mr. Joseph Pedder, about twelve years of age, met with a serious accident, which nearly proved fatal. He was standing on a fence with the butt-end of his gun resting on the top rail, when it slipped and he fell. The gun discharged, and the lower rail, the piece exploded, and the charge (duck shot) tore his clothes from the hip to the shoulder, wounding him severely in the upper part of the arm. At the time our informant wrote, the poor fellow was considered to be out of danger. This accident shows what care should be exercised in the handling of firearms.

NEW ZEALAND.

By the Amelia we have papers to the 3rd of May, our last advices from New Zealand being up to the 25th April.

In the subject of the pensioner force in New Zealand, the Southern Cross has a short article, which, as the subject possesses considerable importance at the present time, we extract:—"The period of service for which some of the Pensioner Companies contracted has expired, and we are enabled to point out a variety of sources, that the Government is seeking to treat with for the surrender of their cottages and highly cultivated acres, in exchange for fifty acres of bush land. To our thinking, there is no point in this contemplated arrangement of a character equally prejudicial to the prosperity of the Pensioner, and detrimental to the best interests of the colony, in which he has been induced to locate himself. For example:—It must be a wretched cottage, and miserable as that is not worth more than £25;—we have heard of about four times that amount being obtained by private sale;—and if the pensioner should convert his holding into cash he will be enabled to purchase a better cottage, and a better piece of land, and have out of his pocket a sum of £25, or 100 acres of pasture land for the like sum. What boon—what premium—is therefore offered by Government to the pensioner to break up his little household, leave his cottage, and his land, and go to the movement? Is a most unwise one, especially at a juncture like this, when the pensioner labour and that of his families is almost the only labour upon which the colonists can rely for carrying on the operations of their farms. We are enabled to point out a method by which the pensioners and the colonists may be certain to be equally benefited. It is to grant them immediately 50 acres of land in fee simple as the first instalment of an exchange, to such as may be willing to part with their cottages, and to point out at the same time let them be in possession (like retired military officers) of a location order for 50 acres more, such additional land to be granted to them in perpetuity, on condition that they remain in the colony for a period of two years after the land has been allotted to them. Such a plan, we are of opinion, would not only be simple justice to the pensioners themselves, but would be the means of inducing many to remain, and, without some such aid, will be apt to take their departure, and leave our labour market in an infinitely worse condition than it even now is. We commend our suggestion to the most serious consideration of the authorities."

INSOLVENT COURT.

SATURDAY.

Before the Chief Commissioner.—In the estate of Ward Stephens, deceased, a special meeting for proof of claims was held. Tender of a claim of £100 was made, but was refused by the Chief Commissioner, on the ground that the affidavit of debt did not put a value on the security. Meeting adjourned until the 12th instant.

In the estate of Morris Mendell, a special meeting had been convened, for proof of claims, but at the hour appointed no person was in attendance. The meeting, therefore, lapsed.

MORTUARY OF CRIMINALS.

Monday, 5.—Thomas Brett, a third meeting, at 11.

Thursday, 8.—James Husband, a second meeting, at 11.

Friday, 9.—Amy Susanna Stanforth, a first meeting, at 11.

Monday, 12.—Ward Stephens, deceased, an adjourned special meeting, for proof of claims, at 11.

Thursday, 15.—Chauncy Perry Scudder, a third meeting, at 11.

Friday, 16.—Amy Susanna Stanforth, a second meeting, at 11.

Friday, 20.—Thomas M. Worthington, a third meeting, at 11.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

Before the Police Magistrate Mr. Kemp.

Thirteen persons were charged with drunkenness, one of whom was discharged, and the remainder were committed, and sentenced to the cells in default of payment.

The free list contained nineteen charges, eight of which were dismissed, and four were remanded for further evidence.

John Sedgewick was, on Wednesday night, given into custody by Mr. J. H. White, of Woolloomooloo Bay, Publican, charged with stealing a watch.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Thursday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Friday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Saturday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Sunday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Monday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Tuesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

On Wednesday, he was brought before Mr. Kemp, when the prosecutor deposed that, in consequence of information given to him by a friend, he had been informed that prisoner was at his house, and he had accordingly gone to his house, and he had seen him there, and he had taken him into custody, and he had brought him before the court.

All Advertisements under six lines will be charged 5c. if to Advertiser's account.

Printed and published by JOHN FAIRFAX, at the "Morning Herald" Printing Office, Lower George-street, Sydney, New South Wales, this 5th day of June 5, 1854.